

STARTING A NEW JOB

Before agreeing to take on a job as a physical therapist, it is essential that you make sure that the employer/clinic owner allows you to meet your regulatory obligations. This checklist captures a number of regulatory obligations you should consider before signing a new employment contract.

Funding, Fees and Billing

You are responsible for all billing under your registration number and for identifying and correcting any errors in a timely manner.

- Be certain that the employer understands that your name and registration number can only be used for billing when you or someone under your supervision has provided physical therapy services.
- Ensure that you have access to billings that include your name, professional title and registration number.
- Ensure that a written fee schedule exists that includes transparent and accurate information for clients about billing policies and all potential charges (e.g., assessments, reports, cancellations, equipment, any additional fees).

Privacy and Record Retention

- Ensure that you understand the requirements of the Standard of Practice: Privacy and Record Retention for clinical and financial records.
- Understand the procedures in place at the clinic for collection, use, disclosure and storage of personal health information of clients in accordance with the Personal Information and Privacy Act (PIPA). The College has a Privacy Toolkit to help explain your obligations under PIPA.
- Be aware of where clinical and financial records of clients will be kept and ensure that they are secured.
- Be certain that clients will be able to access their clinical and financial records upon request within the record retention period.

Working with Physical Therapist Support Workers (PTSWs)

- Talk with your employer about your obligations when supervising and assigning care to PSTWs as described in the Standard of Practice: Supervision and the Supervision Guide. As the supervising physical therapist, you are always responsible for the care delivered by a PSTW under your supervision.
- Ensure that you understand your responsibilities as a supervisor, which include actively monitoring the competency and service delivery of PSTWs under your supervision and establishing an ongoing communication plan.
- Be certain that there is another physical therapist that PSTWs under your supervision can contact if you cannot be reached.
- Ensure that the billing system in place allows for the name and job title of a PSTW who delivered physical therapy services to appear on client invoices and receipts.

Infection Control and Equipment Maintenance

- Talk with the employer about the infection prevention and control measures of the clinic and ensure that you can meet the expectations of the Standard of Practice: Infection Control. The College has an Infection and Prevention and Control guide that provides more detail.
- Review the process in place to ensure that equipment used in the clinic is maintained, inspected, and calibrated on a regular basis, according to manufacturers' recommendations.

Advertising

- Review the advertisements of the workplace and ensure that all advertisements about physical therapy services meet the requirements of the Standard of Practice: Marketing and Advertising as well as College bylaws. If they do not, discuss the changes required to meet the expectations with the employer.

College Registration Requirements

- Obtain liability insurance that meets the requirements of the College. College Bylaws require all full, interim, student and temporary registrants to hold professional liability insurance in an amount of at least $3,000,000 per occurrence.

- Before using dry needling in your PT practice, be certain to apply to, and receive confirmation from, the College.
- Once you have accepted the job, update your information in the College Registrant Portal
- If you are unable to make the changes in the Portal contact registration@chcpbc.org.

Additional Considerations

- Do your research on the employer/clinic to make sure that they are reputable. Working for disreputable employers may impact your relationship with insurance providers. Be sure to do an internet search of any employer you are considering working for as well.
- Know your employment status and its implications—Are you an employee or self-employed? Review advice from Canada Revenue Agency (the Canadian Physiotherapy Association may also have relevant resources on this).
- Understand that you can negotiate clauses in a contract and seek professional advice from a lawyer on verbal and written agreements or contracts between you and the employer.
- Apply caution and ask clarifying questions if an employer directs how you should practice (e.g. selling products, making referrals, assigning physical therapy services).

If you need additional information or have specific questions about starting a new job, contact the Professional Practice Advisors at the College.
